

Make a Music Video

Music videos rely on both a song and lively images to tell a story. You can make a music video as a tribute to your favorite book.

First, write a song about the book. You may choose to write about one particular character or to tell the whole story in song. Set your song to music. You should have one or more singers, as well as instruments—as many as you wish.

Many times, music videos will include dancing and even scenes acted out in order to better tell a story. You may want to include dancing and acting in your video and costumes that will enhance the performances.

Finally, film your video. Notice the different shots and angles that make your favorite music videos so compelling. Can you use these techniques in your own video?

When you are finished filming your video, show it to an audience.

IN/GR/VD

